

Phil Talboy

Philip M. Talboy is currently the Regional STD Training Coordinator for the U.S. Centers for Disease Control. Mr. Talboy received a Philosophy/Theology Degree from Creighton University in Omaha, Nebraska. His background includes two years as a Disease Intervention Specialist in Phoenix, Arizona, three years as an STD supervisor in Miami, Florida and two years as the Regional STD Training Coordinator in Lauderhill, Florida.

Marilyn Volker, Ed.D.

Marilyn Volker is currently a consultant in several areas including human sexuality issues; HIV/AIDS issues; facilitating HIV education programs; and is also a consultant to Health Crisis Network in Miami. Dr. Volker teaches sexuality classes to medical and nursing students, as well. She has a B.S. in Deaf Education from Kent State University in Ohio, a M.Ed. in Deaf Education from the University of Miami, and an Ed.D. in Sexology from the Institute for the Advanced Study of Human Sexuality, San Francisco, California. Dr. Volker has been a sexuality educator for the past twenty years and is certified by the American Association of Sex Educators, Counselors, and Therapists (AASECT) and by the American Board of Sexologists. In addition, she publishes a sexuality column in "CHANGES" magazine which addresses sexuality issues in recovery.

Curtis Wadlington

Curtis Wadlington is currently the Special Assistant to the Chief Executive Officer for Blacks Educating Blacks About Sexual Health Issues (BEBASHI). Nationally respected for his ability to convey his understanding of African American children, he has consulted for many federal, state, and municipal programs throughout the country, including the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and the National Minority AIDS Council. He also designed several creative staff development training workshops for human service professionals on effective approaches to AIDS education for children. He is also a member of the Mayor's Commission on Health Emergencies and a member of the Mayor's Task Force on Teenage Pregnancy in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.